Comcast's Chicago Program Wins National Recognition Awards

Show on the Holocaust Museum and Education Center wins two recognitions

SCHAUMBURG, ILLINOIS (November 8, 2010) – Comcast is pleased to announce that CN100 has won two prestigious recognitions the CableFax's Program Awards and the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences Chicago/Midwest Chapter, for Site of Remembrance, a 30-minute program that takes viewers through an in depth look of the new Holocaust Museum and Education Center located in Skokie, Illinois and personal experiences of two Holocaust survivors.

CN100 Anchor Paul Lisnek hosts Site of Remembrance. Lisnek interviews Richard Hirschhaut, Executive Director of the Illinois Holocaust Museum and Education Center, on his campaign to establish this major international human rights and education center in the Chicago suburb of Skokie since 2004. Viewers also hear from local businessman J.B. Pritzker, as chairman of the Illinois Holocaust Museum and Education Center, who successfully led the effort to build an international institution in the Midwest dedicated to teaching the lessons of the Holocaust and other genocides.

Site of Remembrance explores the museum's goal which is not just about reliving the past, but also about teaching children about the importance of tolerance and diversity so they can work to insure that such a human atrocity never happens again. To punctuate the Holocaust, Site of Remembrance details the stories of two survivors, Fritzie Fritzshall and Sam Harris. Fritzsahl, at the age of 13 in 1944, and her family were deported to Auschwitz-Birkenau extermination camp. She survived selection by pretending to be 15 years old at the advice of one of the inmates when she got off the train. Otherwise, she would have been considered too young to work. Harris and his family, who in 1942, were rounded up for deportation. During the chaos of the round up, Harris' father pushed him out line and told him to run and hide.

Site of Remembrance is the recipient of the CableFAX's Program Awards, which honors the best cable shows, top directors, writers and other content professionals. Previous CableFax winners include Mad Men, 102 Minutes That Changed History, Dan Rather Reports and Diners, Drive Ins and Dives.

On November 6, Site of Remembrance also won the 52nd Chicago/Midwest Emmy Awards Ceremony's Outstanding Achievement for Informational Programs "Conversation/Interview Single Program or Program Series." The award is from the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences Chicago/Midwest Chapter.
